ANNUAL FALL OPENING

IN FULL SWING YOUR INVITED!

WE HAVE MADE GREATER PREPARATION for the fall and winter trade this season than ever and our showing is unquestionably not only the largest and best, but the most complete in this vicinity. We wish to prove this statement to you and want you to consider this a personal invitation. Space will not allow us to give you a fair estimate of the styles and colorings for this season, but the tendency is for the rougher effect both in suits and overcoats. Come in and inspect. The new hats the Hawes Von Gal (American) Hats for fall have just been opened and their smart

BE STRONG--STAY STRONG

Strength doesn't remain always. You have got to take care of the things you already have.

BEEF IRON WINE

Makes you strong. It is the ideal medicine because it is both a food tonic and a stimulant. Delicate people take it because it builds them up. Strong people takes it because it regulates the system.

NOTICE

Mr. W. J. Galt has leased a shop formerly occupied by Mr. A. M. Munroe, and will carry on the business of Horse shoeing and wagon repairing as usual after Oct. 1st. He has been here nearly two years and comes to town highly recommended by Mr. E. W. Rathbun. Desired by women who were employed to meet all the old customers and will give them satisfaction.

W.M. J. GALT

The disadvantage about purchasing a house is that you can't get anything on a mortgage.

The girl who marries a doctor doesn't necessarily have high ideals.

Lots of people who are thoroughly educated know that we shall know each other in heaven, and admiringly forgetting each other here.

The great trouble with a man who has been married twice he is generally such a poor quitter.

SHOT WHILE DUCK-SHOOTING.

Fatal Accident to Recruit of Stephen T. Switzer.

A despatch from Fredericton says: Mr. Samuel Switzer, Recruit of the Township of Ste. Anne, was accidentally shot in the leg about 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, and died about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. He was out shooting, and was having with two other gentlemen, and they were in the act of getting into a boat when the accident happened. The gun and shotgun rods had been passed around the boat, and the gentlemen had also got in, when the gun went off, and Mr. Switzer, who was on land, received the shot in the leg. The wound was immediately dressed, and Mr. Switzer driven to his home, a distance of about twelve miles. His wife, three sons and two daughters survive.

A Visit in the Night;

OR, A SERVICE TO THE STATE

CHAPTER V.—(Cont'd.)

Actuated by a feeling of curiosity, he sat down again and spread the three cablegrams out upon his writing-table. The first two, as I have said, required no consideration, for they spoke for themselves, but the third filled him completely. Who was this Septimus O'Grady who lived in Chicago, and whose associates spent their time discussing the wrongs of Ireland? He was a man of a manly and innocent of private means, he engaged in business!

Then another question called for consideration. Who was this Nuttall, and what brought him to London and took him so repeatedly into the Midlands? These riddles he set aside for the present, and began to pick the last cablegram to pieces. This author was not easy in his mind when he wrote it was quite certain.

Then who and what were the Alpha and Omega men? What connected them with the North? Why so short did nineteen and twelve mean when coupled with Today? Further, why should five letters range seventy-eight Brazil? And where did the letter "A" come out of the numbers one, seven, nine and nine? He read the message from beginning to end again, after that from the end to the beginning, and like a good many other men in his position he found he could not understand it; found himself taking a greater interest in it. This feeling had not left him when he had put off disguise as Klimo and had returned to the office.

While he was eating his lunch the thought of the lonely Irishman lying ill in a house, where he was most doubt an unwelcome guest, grieved him strangely, and when he rose from the table he found he was not able to shake off the impression it had given him. That the girl had some notion of her father's whereabouts he felt as certain as of his own name, or that she was extremely fond of him. But why was she so evidently afraid of him? Had he not been a simply innocent business messenger in cipher? That she was evidently as plain as the sun shining in her room. Despite the fact that he had resolved not to take up the case, he went into his study, and took the cablegram out of the desk in which he had placed them. Then drawing a sheet of paper towards him, he wrote:

"I am not in the possession of your name, but I am in the possession of information which enables me to find out exactly what he is. If you answer me, I will tell you what is probable that after all I will take your case up, and help you to save your father's life, but if you decline to do so, as he is, he will go to prison, within twenty-four hours, and then nothing on earth can save him from condign punishment. What do you prefer?"

"I will tell you everything," she said, "but I will not tell you what I have done."

"I will tell you everything," she said, "but I will not tell you what I have done."

"Pardon me," he answered quickly, "but I am in the possession of information which enables me to find out exactly what he is. THE PUBLIC PLEAD FOR THEM

FAMOUS CRIMINALS WHO OBTAINED REPRIEVES.

Drunks Instances in England Where They Were Saved from the Gallows.

"Nothing rouses the British public like a sense of injustice done to a fellow-creature," said Sir William Harcourt, Home Office Secretary; and not infrequently prisoners have found themselves the subjects of extraordinary de- cisions in their behalf, says London Answer.

Nearly 50,000 persons signed the petition in favor of Daisy Laird, the poor girl recently released after 16 months of imprisonment. She was condemned for the death of her child in the most pitiful circumstances. In thousands of homes the story of her sorrowful despair of life, her frenzied touches of death, and her awakened pride to sympathy with her and to indignation at what one of our most distinguished judges once described as an "intimidated and illegal form" which had dictated the cruel sentence passed upon her.

MRS. MAYBRIK GUIUTY.

That news spread through the country one August morning in 1899 aroused thousands of readers of her trial to protest. The night had hardly closed upon the spreading of the news before petitions were being prepared and circulated through the country for signatures praying that the wretched lady might be saved from the scaffold. When completed, the Maybrick petition was the most remarkable one for a private cause which have ever seen. It bore no fewer than upon a million signatures, including those of fifty-two members of the House of Commons. One of the most remarkable features of the Marshick appeal was that something like 32 per cent. of the signatures were those of women.

PARDON FOR KITTY BIRON.

At eleven o'clock one December night, eight years ago, a cab drove up to the entrance of Holloway Prison and a man leapt out. He was a messenger from the Home Office bearing sealed despatch from the Home Secretary for immediate delivery into the hands of the governor of the prison. A few moments later the governor, the chaplain and the head wardress were tramping down the long corridors of the prison to the cell in which was confined Miss Kitty Biron, the young girl condemned to death a few days previously for the killing of her employer, whom she had wounded while in the service of the latter's daughter during his absence. Thousands of people hurried to append their names to the petitions in her favor. Even on the Stock Exchange itself people hurried to sign the appeal for mercy and in less than a week 500,000 men and women were pleading on her behalf. The Home Secretary anticipated the presentation of the petition by commuting the death sentence but later on the master petition was sent to the Home Office urging him to a mitigation of the sentence of penal servitude for life.

LIEUTENANT WARK'S CASE.

Liverpool was the centre of another great agitation for mercy in 1898, when the people of Lancashire were aroused respecting the fate of Lieutenant Wark, of the Royal Artillery. Lieutenant Wark had been condemned to death by Mr. Justice Darling at the preceding assizes. Wark was accused of the murder of a woman. Even though guilty, there were circumstances that appeared to make his offence one for merciful consideration. The jury had themselves strongly recommended a mitigation to mercy, and the public found themselves in accord with their verdict. A morally, but at the same time touching speech made by the prisoner after the verdict had a vast effect. Now, however, that 54,000 persons signed the petition in his behalf, and the sentence was later on commuted to one of merely three years' penal servitude.

JESSIE MCLACHLAN.

From morning till night people flocked to the places in Edinburgh, Glasgow, and in all the large towns throughout the British Isles where prisoners were tried on the behalf of the young woman who had been pronounced guilty of the murder of Jessie Macpherson, the maid-servant who had been discovered mysteriously dead in a house in Sandyford Place, Glasgow. The jury had found her guilty, and the judge expressed his entire sympathy with the public regarding the case as one of mystery. "McLachlan shall not die" was the cry of thousands. Crowds flocked to the places where the maid in her behalf were lying and in vain the sentence was commuted to one of life-long imprisonment.

THE GREAT PENGUIN MYSTERY.

A huge sensation was created by the result of the Penguin case, when three persons named Stauton—two brothers and the son of a widow—were charged with the谋杀 of the wife of the younger brother by starving her to death. The case was the first murder trial over which Mr. Justice Hawke presided, and the prisoners were defended by Sir Edward Clarke.

But whether the death of the unfortunate woman was designed or accidental remains a question, and people gave a grasp of the situation when the trial resulted in the conviction of all four persons being found guilty of wilful murder and sentenced to death. A few hours later passed through the country.

Agitation in favor of the prisoners commenced on all sides. Over 50,000 persons attached their signatures to a petition asking that the death sentence be commuted. One for a private cause which have ever seen. It bore no fewer than upon a million signatures, including those of fifty-two members of the House of Commons.

ARE PETITIONS USELESS?

No petitions in behalf of prisoners have ever been successful. Some have questioned it. But there is really no doubt that a petition, largely signed and urging reasonable grounds for revision of a sentence, will be of considerable value to a Home Secretary.

"What the public brain thinks and the public heart feels," Sir Richard Cross is said to have remarked to a legal gentleman who entered his office. "I am sure you will pay attention to the matter." I shall never turn a deaf ear to a voice pleading for mercy. I will listen and consider though I may be unable to agree with it."

THE HOME CIRCLE

A happy creature is better than a big bank account.

There is more sunshine in life to the minute than there is misery to the mile. But after all, it is just the way you look at it.

I always see the bright side of the tree will tell the tale so if a child is subjected to improper influence and example the scars will remain and his life be blighted.

A wise man may be provoked, but he cannot be angered. He will still have a smile on his face and a heart that he knows will plant a thorn there. The fool cherishes this enemy to his own destruction.

You may preach sermons and advocate reforms which do not benefit you and your children, but they will be cynical by the glittering saloon of sin unless you can make your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them.

The virtues grow about the heart and the soul who is a stranger to them. Your beautifully kept home busy mother, can never be a home to the daughter you have no time to care for.

We believe that lives are wrecked as much by the storms of life, as
by drifting with the tide and striking those rocks and coming in contact with the world, and the contact with the shore. Put out on the deep water, head your bark up the stream none but gay, innocent people drift with the tide.

Let us take time to get acquainted with our families. The wealth you are accumulating will be of little use to the son who is a stranger to you. Your beautifully kept home busy mother, can never be a home to the daughter you have no time to care for.

We believe that lives are wrecked
as much by the storms of life, as
by drifting with the tide and striking
those rocks and coming in contact with the world, and the contact with the shore. Put out on the deep
water, head your bark up the stream
none but gay, innocent people drift
with the tide.

All social circles welcome cheerfulness. A sunny face is an open invitation to health and happiness.
The smiling face dispels fear, ravished, and hope made to rise triumphant, where fear and doubt and despair had high priority. Your own joy will be sweetened by your own joys heightened by your perennial heaven-light sunny face.

In the family relation every one should always be at his best. The husband ought to be a heaven sent to the wife, the wife to the husband on earth. There should be no purpose without flowers about the hearth stone and no purposely clouded sense of duty without a bright sunbeam to make home conduct exemplary. Certainly all want a pleasant home. Certainly all want smiles instead of frowns.

This is the natural desire of every mother that her daughter should marry well to use a current phrase. But we must not upon this particular the word well, until it is applied to a young man's income or financial possessions. When one is married to a man whose income and assets come in always not a more cruel hardship which to make a young man than the which he has to pay for the cost of his choices. We do not advocate the lives in a cottage theory, by any means. We will believe in the good old fashioned theory that young people starting out into the world with a moderate income, and the climbing upward together.

Too many mothers consider their children as simple objects for display, as ornaments, vanity and pride.
Little Mary must be kept in pure white clothes all the season through, and the boy must be dressed in brown, and the mother's strength is sufficient to provide the numberless changes and washings required. Little Mary will be seen in the crowd of blue dress such as millionaire's children are not ashamed to wear for play dresses every day. Try to teach her this ideal of dressing up of which has set up for her.

It is the natural desire of mothers who are fond of their children to keep them clean and tidy, and to make them look attractive. It is the natural desire of the child to play and to be stated forever in dress gray.

COURTESY

There are many reasons why we should do that. Being growers of fruit and vegetables we find that Oshawa is a good market for the same and the stores are doing a large business in encouraging the growers and boost their growing city.

The impelling motive for opening the new store is to give attention to the great boon to Oshawa and its neighborhood in their Cannery Factory. We hear on all sides such remarks as "We will buy from you" and our study was it not for Mr. Smith's Canning Factory. It must surely be a large market for the high quality and a larger market by the high quality paid for fruit this season. It has put some of us on test." Others have done the same and we are sure that the rest will follow.

RECIPE FOR SPIED PEAR

Wash one-half peck of seckal pears, prick with a fork and boil in boiling water to cover the skin. Carefully remove a stone, pour over the following syrup: Mix one pound of white sugar, 14 cupsful of vinegar, 14 cupsful of water, 14 cupsful of whole cloves and stick cinnamon, broken in pieces. Bring to a boiling point and boil for 15 minutes. Cover pan, let stand two days. Drain off syrup, bring to the boiling point, let stand three minutes and pour over fruit. Boil again. In the jar keep a muslin bag in which is tied two muslin bags of whole cloves and stick cinnamon.

OLD METHODS WON'T DO NOW

The time has passed when apples, dried and browned in the Markets of New York city, while the Markets of New York are being abandoned.

Three or four cities in a day often were recently among themselves—of course, in their employer's time. They were deeply intent upon trying to hold their market, and when, upon their fingers, otherwise, when just as one of them had a large card pinned to his coat, he would turn and walk the head of the firm. "Why, Hogan, I am surprised!" he sternly observed. "How ever can you do it?" "Practice, sir!" Hogan replied, carried away. "Practice."

WEATHER OBSERVER

Osgoode, comes forward with the prediction, that the summer will fade into winter so quickly that one will hardly know that he has been told the winter will be a long and severe one. He based his prediction, and according to him, on the fact that in past summer he has been long and hot, while the last winter according to the Osgoode version was a mild one. Osgoode, however, is the man of the man who says that last winter was a mild one.
